

Jo Sanders
Director, Center for Gender Equity
A.B.D., University of Michigan

---

Jo Sanders has provided consulting services of the highest quality to education and employment institutions and programs for three decades. Her work has been featured in the Washington Post, Dallas Morning News, Seattle Times, USA Today, Boston Globe, San Francisco Chronicle, and the New York Times, among many others. She has appeared on Good Morning, America and many radio stations. Ms. Sanders has published articles on gender equity in Education Leadership, Education Digest, Phi Delta Kappan, ERIC Digest, WEEA Digest, and many other periodicals, in addition to ten books and many book chapters.

Jo Sanders has been the director of the Center for Gender Equity since the mid-80s. Under her leadership the Center has carried out numerous precedent-setting research and development projects on gender equity in technology, science, and mathematics. The projects have for the most part been nationwide in scope, frequently funded by the National Science Foundation. The Center has also provided extensive staff development for educators at all levels on gender equity, with workshops, seminars, and lectures delivered extensively throughout the United States and abroad.

Selected Publications

"Gender and Technology: What the Research Tells Us," Handbook of Gender and Education, Chris Skelton, Becky Francis & Lisa Smulyan (eds.), Sage Publications, London, in press for 2006.

"Gender and Technology: A Research Review." www.josanders.com/resources, 2005.

"Lessons I've Learned in 22 Years of Working with Teachers about Girls in IT." www.josanders.com/resources, 2005.

"Gender and Technology in Education Bibliography." www.umbc.edu/cwit/itgenderbib, 2005.

"Closing Gender Gaps in Science," with Sarah Cotton Nelson. Educational Leadership, 62(3), November 2004, pages 74-77.